OPEN WAR ON TAX DODGERS

The annual battle between the tax dodgers and the assessors is on. At 8 o'clock today the Board of Assessors started the work of levying taxes upon the real estate and personal property of the city in a task that will be watched by the citizens with more than ordinary interest, in view of the recent efforts of prominent tax dodgers.

The assessors are particularly vigilant for cases of tax dodging. SUFFRAGISTS WATCH LISTING TWO ODD FIRES ROUT WORKMEN

Suffragists are closely watching the police listing of voters today to see that the officers do not overlook any women voters.

Arranged with white and green cards, the police began the annual listing of the local voters of Boston. The cards were left in every household, hotel or lodging house, and were to be filled out and returned to the police by the evening of April 1.

One result of the listing is expected to be a noticeable increase in the population figures of Boston over those of the last United States census, which gave the city about 650,000 inhabitants.

Green and White Lists.

Information to be filed in the green cards relates to owners of buildings and occupants of the first floor. Information relating to other occupants of the house or building is filed in the white cards.

The present recording of street, number and name, the property and name of the owner, and also full details of the residence on the card.

Hundreds of voters who live in cities and towns in the metropolitan district have been in this city for the purpose of recording, or obtaining a voting residence card, in the city.

BIG CROWD SEES FLOWER SHOW

Two thousand lovers of flowers, including more than 1,000 children from public and private schools, visited the horticultural show in Mechanics Building yesterday.

The most interesting and pleasing feature of the National Flower Show—the table and small cut flower display—was set by the management to terminate the exhibit.

Today and tomorrow an additional crowd of new and novel designs in cut flower displays will be given. Quality and quantity combined with artistic ingenuity and disregard of expense were the motives which brought out the best that the exhibitors could produce in the competition.

One of the most recent admirers of the competitive exhibits yesterday was Mrs. E. M. of Medford, whose home in the main hall is the owner of her box of flowers and many others who have heard of the well-known lover of flowers.

Mrs. S. J. of New in her eighth year, but her love of nature's floral beauty has not diminished since her arrival in the city. Since 1895 Mrs. S. J. has maintained an interest in horticulture, and has been a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and an active member of the National Flower Show.

The management will offer all children under sixteen years an opportunity to visit the show, free of charge, on Monday, April 3, and Tuesday, April 4, from 10 o'clock to 4 o'clock.

RUSTLERS HAVE NO BOTHER BEATING COLUMBIA TEAM

PLAN PITCHING RUN FOR STARS

ATLANTA, Ga., April 1.—There is a possibility that the out-of-control pitching duel between Clarity Mathew-son and Walter Johnson will be repeated as the leading pitchers of their time. If it of all time, it will be staged here this week.
Members of the Washington team, which has been trailing here for some weeks, even as far as to issue a challenge to the Yankees for their respective teams as the members of both clubs would be in a new such a contest.
The chances of its being put on are slim.
Mathewson and Johnson are the most professional pitchers in the country, and they were never much more than a couple of stars in the game. They are also a couple of himself to the limit, and the probabilities are that he would have to be himself on all the way to last Johnson.

STRETCH it is that that we ever seem to stand in front of—
The slender pinnae; the hour we know
Nimrod is waiting; we have left loose
All false and useless follies, and the need,
Through which we struggled to this frame
and Lies awaiting by breath of time; our face is
With thought of grand accomplishment
when let!
The place where by a murmur, half-lost:
hand
Are paid up the gates of heaven; was so
A further peak bathed in the morning sun
And if we be of courage start again,
Quiver of effort, some light
For when we think the summit nearly won
Death
the end, stopping, life as from the plain.

One Marvelous Cow and Many Sad Children

Uncle Sam Keeps Up a Most Expensive Cow Department. Telling How to Protect a Cow's Health. And He Has a Fine Department for the Protection of Hogs—But No Department for the Protection of Children or Their Mothers

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

We have already told you something about her. She is eight years old, her name is Missouri Chief Josephine. She has beaten the records of all the cows that were ever raised in this world. She lives in the stable attached to the College of Agriculture in the University of Missouri, at Columbia, Mo., and she is interesting from a dozen points of view.

The mere fact that this is the champion cow of the world is enough to interest Americans, for we are all more or less insane on the subject of championship. We are all interested in Rockefeller, the champion millionaire, and also in the man who can eat the greatest number of buckwheat cakes, or of pounds of beefsteak. The champion runner, baseball player, fighter, all have their followers.

More important than all is this champion COW. For her championship means FEEDING THE HUMAN RACE, REDUCING THE COST OF LIVING BY MAKING THE EARTH AND THE FOOD ANIMALS OF THE EARTH MORE PRODUCTIVE.

The farmer who has a cow that gives twelve quarts of milk a day, SOME days, and less or none other days, becomes interested when he hears of a cow that every day for six months in succession gives 46.7 quarts of milk.

Missouri Chief Josephine, the champion, gave in six months recorded just 17,008.4 pounds of milk. She beat the best record of any other cow in the world by 1,458 pounds.

The amount of butter produced by Champion Missouri Chief Josephine in six months was 629 pounds. And as she goes along in the present test she is giving more and more butter per pound of milk.

To realize the kind of a cow that she is and how well it pays to produce such cows, you must know that the average cow gives a little more than half a pound of butter daily, if all her milk is used for butter, whereas Josephine, the champion, gives between three and four pounds a day. So that when you keep her you get as much butter as though you were keeping six ordinary cows.

Josephine weighs 1,370 pounds. She produces an average of 93.4 pounds of milk per day—THIS WONDERFUL COW PRODUCES MORE THAN TWICE HER OWN WEIGHT IN MILK EACH MONTH. SHE PRODUCES HER OWN WEIGHT IN MILK EVERY TWO WEEKS.

Professor Ezkies declares that the milk produced by Josephine in six months is equal to "more human food than is contained in the carcasses of three steers weighing 1,250 pounds each." In other words, three male cattle, each about the size of Josephine, would have to be killed and eaten every six months in order to supply as much food as Josephine gives in her milk and butter—and at the end of six months you still have Josephine, worth about $20,000 to-day.

This estimate of her value is no exaggeration, for you must know that this year's calf by Josephine is worth $3,000.

And you must also know that Josephine is different from some more fashionable mothers. There is nothing of the race suicide cow about her. She has had a calf every year for five years, and following upon that credible accomplishment she now beats the world's record as a milk producer in six months, and according to the professors that have her in charge, she will probably do very much better in a full year's test, proportionately, than she has done this far. She is improving every day. And Josephine has a right, not only to look down upon the ordinary graying steer, her humble brother out in the fields, but also on the two-legged laborers around her. Josephine's production is worth $1,500 in cash per year—not counting her calf, worth $3,000. The ordinary man, according to the United States statistics, earns about $500 in a year. So that Josephine with her milk alone can earn as much as three men. And if you add the value of the calf to the value of the milk she is worth about as much as nine men, of the average working kind.

Now, fellow citizens, before going into the further details of the life and adventures of Josephine, the great cow, let us ask ourselves how it happens that this wonderful creature has been produced.

Her existence is due to the fact that the great and powerful government of the United States and the rich governments of the various States, actually take a deep interest in mothers, their offspring and their care, WHEN THE MOTHERS HAPPEN TO BE COWS OR SOWS.

The United States government at Washington, D. C., maintains a bureau at great expense, studying cows and their needs, studying swine and their needs, horses and the other animals which make up the wealth of the farm and that feed the human race.

Everything that science, money and care can possibly do through government means is done for the mothers of calves, of pigs, of horses, of goats, of chickens, of ducks and of geese.

There are government books, which any farmer can get free, that will tell him how to treat properly, kindly and scientifically the sow or the cow about to become a mother.

The government sends out free of cost books carefully illustrated, showing just exactly how the young animals should be brought into the world, what care should be given to their mothers, exactly what food is best for them, what rest, what shelter and what gentle treatment is required.

Josephine, the champion cow, is no ACCIDENT. Her existence is due to the fact that government, human intelligence, has thought it worth while to develop to the highest degree the comfort and the care of the mothers of ANIMALS.

Does it seem to you a pity that the government has not thus far found time or inclination or money to devote to the welfare of the mothers of human children?

Sometimes we learn from contrasts—here are a few contrasts:

Josephine lives in a large, roomy, airy, sunny box stall. She is screened in carefully with mosquito netting to keep away the flies and mosquitoes. In the warm weather above her head there is always turning an electric fan that keeps the air cool and drives away any fly that

The Fair Patricia Was Not at Home—to Them

With great regret this newspaper announces the death of Miss Winifred Seathford, for many years a member of the Boston AMERICAN and the New York Evening Journal's editorial staffs.

Her death is a loss to her profession, in which she was sincerely respected for her ability and her goodness. The loss to this newspaper and to all of her colleagues, from the small office boys that remember her personal kindness to the editors whose responsibility she shared, is very great.

Her generous nature and sympathetic heart shone in her daily work, devoted always to the welfare of women and young girls, and especially devoted to those less fortunate and most in need of kind and sisterly advice.

She did not sign her name to her writings, and many thousands and tens of thousands of girls and women have lost a good friend personally unknown to them.

On another page will be found a tribute to her memory written by Dorothy Dix, who expresses beautifully the esteem and affection in which Winifred Seathford was held by all that knew her.

may happen to get inside this mosquito netting. And another fan at an open window keeps driving in fresh air constantly.

Contrast that with the surroundings of any one among hundreds of thousands of human mothers, taking care not of one child, but of three or four or more, with a young baby in her arms and a child hardly able to walk holding her skirt, trying to supply the sucking child with food, standing over a red-hot stove, cooking for a whole family, tormented by the heat, by the flies, by the landlord, by the dust and the dirt of the city streets. Do you wonder that the death rate among two-legged children is so much greater than among four-legged calves? Do you wonder that so many human mothers die before their time?

The champion cow Josephine has her food especially prepared and indicated by chemists. What she eats is always thoroughly tested and analyzed, that she may make only the best of blood for herself and produce the best of milk for her valuable calf.

Contrast that with the feeding of human mothers and of their children, at the mercy of adulterated foods, extortionate trusts and prices, especially cursed by poverty, with the unfit and insufficient food that goes with poverty.

Chief Josephine is treated with the very greatest kindness at all times. It is said of her, "She is never struck or excited in any manner, because any nervous shock causes a decrease in her milk production." Once an accident happened to her electric fan, the flies bothered her, Josephine's nerves were disturbed, and that day she only produced seventy-four pounds of milk, eighteen pounds less than the day before.

Contrast that with a mother taking care of a young baby, welcoming at night a brutal and perhaps a drunken husband, striving to pacify him, to quiet a crying child, to soothe the fears of older children. Is it not wonderful that such a mother can take care of her children AT ALL? Is it strange that so many of the children on the breasts of poor mothers look half starved and die so easily? For surely even a very refined cow like Chief Josephine is less refined and less nervous than a human mother. And if the cow's constitution is affected by a little discomfort, without any brutality whatever, to the extent of eighteen pounds of milk daily, what must be the effect on the nervous system of a nursing mother, married for her misfortune to a brutal or an unthinking husband?

The government of the United States is very much excited when any disease breaks out among the sows that produce the little pigs. There are swift measures of relief, generous spending of money, careful quarantine, that other sows and other little pigs may not suffer. Remedies are supplied, information given, special sow doctors are sent out from Washington at government expense. No sow or cow need lie neglected with helpless pigs or calf beside her.

It is not so with human mothers. Infantile paralysis may carry off their children, consumption may—and does—carry the mothers and children away by the tens of thousands yearly. The government of the United States says, "That is not my business. I am a fatherly government to cows and sows, for four-legged but not for two-legged mothers."

Don't you think it would be reasonable to ask the government of the United States to show in the mothers of human children the same interest that the government now shows in the mothers of calves and pigs? It is an excellent thing, of course, that the animals should be taken care of, and that the wealth of the nation should be increased by wide investigation of animal diseases and by all possible help to the farmers.

But while it is true that a human child, unlike the child of Chief Josephine, cannot be sold for $3,000, and while it is true that a group of human children cannot be changed into cash in the market place, like a litter of pigs—YET CHILDREN HAVE SOME VALUE SURELY.

The prosperity of the country is really produced by human beings, not by cows and sows and horses. The farmer at the head of the farm is the man to whom the nation owes its agricultural wealth. The man at the head of the factory, the man with the tool in his hand are wealth producers. They have their value.

The mothers MAKE all of these children that become creators of wealth.

Leaving out decency and the various religious beliefs that are supposed to be entertained in this country, wouldn't it be even a PAYING INVESTMENT if the government of the United States should interest itself in human mothers and their children?

It is suggested now that there should be established at Washington a bureau of health, a department that would interest itself in fighting disease, in spreading knowledge as to the proper care of children, of mothers in childbirth, information as to the fighting of epidemics.

No more important suggestion has been made in this country since the government was established. Of course it is fought by selfishness and by ignorance. It is fought ignorantly by those that are stupid and sincere in their opposition. It is fought cunningly by those that are intelligent and selfish in their opposition.

The department of HUMAN health should be established, and the government of the United States should spend part of its money and devote part of its energy and intelligence to the protection of human beings, as in the past it has devoted intelligence and money to the protection of cows and other animals.

Meanwhile, take off your hat to Chief Josephine. She is a lady among cows, a good worker and a good mother.
